DISTRICT FARMERS FAVOR PRODUCER MARKETING BOARDS

At a meeting in Athabasca on August 12, the farmers of this area voted to support the AFA in its marketing policy.

Karl Kapler, representing the AFA, explained that the purpose of the meeting was to bring together the farmers, and Mr. Aloisio, to discuss the problems of marketing agricultural produce and Producer Marketing Boards.

The AFA has been pressing the government for legislation for farmers similar to that under which professions and labor operate.

There are two phases to agriculture, Mr. Kapler said. The first, producing, has improved but the second phase, marketing, has remained under the old system of speculative marketing for most products. Produce Marketing Boards would solve the problem and give the producer something to say about the price he receives for his products.

The Federation of Agriculture, representing 56 farm organizations, together with the Farmer's Union is trying to build up a stable farm economy. A Producer Marketing Board would stabilize the price of farm produce and do away with fluctuations in this price.

A Producer Marketing Board would be a board of directors elected by the producers of a particular product, and set up under provincial legislation; to regulate and control the marketing of the product for all the producers. Handling would not be done by the board but through the usual distribution centres at the direction and control of the board. All farm produce, except grains and fluid milk, are now sold on the open speculative market.

Producer Marketing Boards would bring marketing up to the efficiency of production. The producer would have a say in the price he receives for a product. We are told that the law of supply and demand sets the price. Seldom does price reflect this law, but a board is the proper body to translate supply and demand, not some outside group.

No other industry hands its produce to other groups to market. Some products are seasonal and build up surpluses. The dealer must store these surpluses and assumes the risk at the expense of the producer. The price of perishable goods is set so low that the only way it may move is up.

Under a board, produce would be sold to the best advantage and risk would not exist as a reserve would be set up to underwrite loss on surpluses.

Speculation creates artificial prices, causing prices to go to a new high or a new low. Speculators buy low and sell high.

Competition puts price up during short supply and lowers it when supply is plentiful. Dealers can offer products at low prices to get the markets, and pass the drop back to producers. We must have control over our products.

A Marketing Board would equalize or pool prices. At the end of the year the producer would receive an equalizing payment which would give him the average price for all produce sold throughout the year.

In summing up, Mr. Kapler said that Producer Marketing Boards would supervise and direct the handling and marketing of farm produce. The handlers would be responsible to the producers. Buying has bargaining power but selling is unorganized and has no bargaining power.

Agriculture should get the same deal as the people who process our products. Farmers who are hard up will mine the soil instead of maintaining the fertility to feed and cloth the future generations of the world. Some system should be found to preserve this fertility and giving the farmers a fair deal with regard to the price received for produce might be the answer.

Speaking for the government, Mr. Aloisio said he was a farmer interested in farm problems. Grain can be stored but it is doubtful if animal products can be stored for long periods of time.

Perhaps a board will do what has been outlined but there are two opposing factors. First, the farmer would have to sell what he produces regardless of price, and second, he would be compelled to sell through the board. Is this what the farmer wants?

Injured Thief Is Caught In Hospital

EDMONTON (BUP)—A check of Edmonton hospitals last Friday resulted in the arrest of a man who allegedly broke into a city store.

Police, who investigated the break-in at Ferguson's Hardware at 10648 101 St., discovered a glass door broken and a pool of blood nearby.

Police surmised the burglar had injured himself and ordered a quick check on city hospitals. Shortly after, a man, identified as George Shaw, was arrested at the Misericordia hospital while undergoing treatment for a cut leg.

Shaw was charged with shop-breaking.

Blinking Drivers

The average man drives 25 miles with his eyes shut if he averages 40 miles during a 10-hour trip. And it's a darn good thing he doesn't do it all in one stretch.

The department of motor vehicles at Raleigh, North Carolina, explains that the average person blinks 25 times a minutes, and each blink lasts one-fifth of a second.

«« Your Canadian Vacation »»

Canada, says the Monthly Letter of the Royal Bank of Canada, is an ideal place in which to spend a vacation. In a re-print of this article we high-light Canadian vacation spots for the holiday-minded.

From the point of view of the individual, the question to be answered about a vacation is: where can I find what I want at a price I can pay? The question before the community is: are we doing all we should to attract, hold, satisfy and entertain visitors?

We must not be hesitant and piece-meal about expanding the tourist industry. Pointing to the natural features which make our country attractive, too many people are content to allow the tourist traffic to develop itself.

It is true that every part of Canada holds out the lure and opportunity of a new frontier to people from other parts, but they will not come to any particular place unless they are told about its attractions and assured of its welcome and satisfied that it has the accommodation they desire.

Our Park System

Canada's first national park was established in 1885 around the mineral hot springs at Banff. Today the parks are Canada's greatest single tourist attraction. From April 1 to September 30, last year, they were visited by 2,520,000 persons, while historic parks and sites drew an additional 240,000 visitors. By far the most popular of the national parks were Banff, Alberta; Riding Mountains, Manitoba; and Point Pelee, Ontario.

The Canadian Government Travel Bureau has issued a folder, with colored illustrations and an animated map, telling about the national parks, their location, size and attractions—from Prince Edward Island's coastal strip on the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the largest national playground in North America, Jasper's 4,200 square miles of Rockies. The first has a story-book appeal for the visitor, because Green Gables, the farm house immortalized by Lucy Maud Montgomery in her novel Anne of Green Gables has been preserved there, with its Lake of Shining Waters, the Haunted Wood, and Lover's Lane. Jasper Park is a mountain playground and noted wildlife sanctuary, with majestic peaks, great ice-fields, beautiful lakes, and hot mineral springs.

There are provincial parks, too, with an area of 34,000 square miles, and in addition there are forest preserves, fish hatcheries, and bird sanctuaries. In the Northwest Territories and Alberta is an immense region (17,300 square miles) of forests and open plains which is the home of the largest remaining herd of bison on the continent.

Historic Sites

Enlightened people among us have been energetic in preserving the historic sites of Canada, believing them to be vital links with the past and strong attractions in the present.

Tourists do not want only plaques and cairns; they wish to stand and walk on the shores where history records Champlain walked; to touch the wall of the farmhouse where Madeleine de Vercheres stood off an Indian raid; to meditate on the ground where the martyred priests Brebeuf, Lalemant last message to the Hurons; to and their companions spoke their photograph the rock on which Mackenzie, first to reach the Pacific overland from Canada, wrote his famous lines.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police Museum at Regina is a unique treasure house of western lore; Bytown Museum in Ottawa and Chateau de Ramezay in Montreal display fascinating memorials of the birth of Canada, the American invasion, the French and British regimes; and the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto has treasures of history and culture from all the earth and from all ages.

As tourist attractions, however, it is important that we revive the past by restoring old trading posts and forts, marking portages which were of significance in our history, and preserving such remains as there are of the original structures and natural features. Let us locate and publicize our legends. Evangeline and the Maid of the Mist and the Woman in White were not historical characters, but the legends woven around them add zest and interest for the tourist at Acadia and Niagara Falls and Montmorency Falls.

We have folk-songs, too. Marius Barbeau has collected them, with their music, in books obtainable from the National Museum of Canada, Ottawa, for 25 cents each: Folk Songs of Old Quebec and Come A Singing! Canadian Folk Songs. The latter has more than 20 illustrations by Arthur Lismer.

The stream of history has deposited across Canada a variety of culture and tradition, so that each region has something to set it off from others. It is four and a half centuries since John Cabot's ship first scraped our shores; Jacques Cartier, brave and skilful Breton sailor, arrived in 1534; Wolfe and Montcalm, each patriotic for his own homeland, are now commemorated jointly in a monument on the battlefield which was fatal to them both in that long-ago war. In all these four and half centuries great events have happened, stirring deeds have been performed, which would make our countryside from Atlantic to Pacific come alive in the eyes of visitors, if only we told about them in a lively way.

Holidays for Canadians

Canadian holidays are not for visitors from other countries only, but for Canadians, too. Inter-provincial travel is a remarkable eye-opener, and a vacation in Canada will enhance the pride which Canadians already have in their country.

The Canadian Tourist Association set up a committee at its annual meeting in October to study the development of inter-provincial travel. This seemed necessary because closeness of United States cities all along our southern boundary is a potent attraction; Canadian travellers spent $293½ million in the United States in 1952.

Evidence of growing interest in awakening Canadians to the attractions of their homeland is found in the adjoining provinces of Quebec and Ontario. Booklets describing the tourist facilities of Quebec are distributed in English in Ontario, and just last year the Hon. George H. Doucett, Minister of the Ontario Department of Highways, issued in French a booklet describing and picturing the roadside parks of Ontario: Les Parcs de Tourisme de l'Ontario.

Interest is growing, too, in telling Canadians about the year-round vacation possibilities we have. Every month can be a holiday month in this country, there is no reason for clinging to the old-fashioned idea of a twelve week vacation period.

There are some benefits to be had from taking a holiday in winter rather than in summer. Many industries and businesses offer their employees a two-week vacation in summer, but three weeks if the vacation is taken in November to April. This offers an opportunity to employees for an extra week of holiday, and to resorts for an extension of their business if they make out-of-season holidaying interesting.

Let's Be Canadian

In some districts of Canada we go out of our way to greet visitors with shows of what they expected to leave behind them when they came on vacation. We have been ingenious in making them feel at home, whereas the whole idea of taking a vacation is to feel away from home.

If we want visitors from the United States, there is no use in trying to imitate slavishly things which are done in the United States. The tourist who has come all the way from his home is not going to be satisfied with a copy, however good it may be (and some are pretty bad) of what he is accustomed to seeing. He doesn't want to visit cafes and hotels aping United States prototypes, even to their names. There is a Canadian way of life, and visitors should be shown it.

Hunt Buffalo By Helicopter

EDMONTON (BUP) — Buffalo Bill wouldn't believe his eyes. The buffalo that the pioneers used to hunt on foot and horseback are now being trailed by government officials in a helicopter. The Northern Affairs Department is using one of the whirly-birds to check the migratory habits of buffalo in Wood Buffalo Park.

The herd which roams the northern part of Alberta and southern edge of the Northwest Territories is the largest in North America. And in order to keep track of the animals, a departmental official leans out of the helicopter and squirts them with paint from a firefighter's pump.

Wants $52,296 From C.N.R.

EDMONTON (BUP) — An Edmonton man injured in a car-train collision is filing a statement of claim against the C.N.R. for damages totalling $52,296.

According to the claim, the car was dragged along the tracks and destroyed, and Krysa, seriously injured.

REVIVE DISCUSSION ON SATELLITE TOWN

PLANNING COMMISSION ASKED TO APPROVE NEW SCHEME

A special meeting of the Edmonton district planning commission may be called for next week to consider a new plan of subdivision for the proposed hamlet of Campbellton, seven miles east of Edmonton.

Full Production Soon At Fort

EDMONTON (BUP) — An executive of the Sheritt-Gordon nickel producing plant at Fort Saskatchewan, Alta., says peak production should be reached this fall.

Managing director of the firm Eldon L. Brown said in Edmonton yesterday that peak production will be about 25 tons a day. The majority of this early output, the executive added, will go to the United States.

Nickel is used in producing high-alloy and stainless steels.

Promoters of the plan, it is said, have designed a new scheme which has received the approval of the municipal district of Strathcona, in which it will be located.

The plan was submitted to the planning commission technicians, who referred it to the commission's executive committee. The committee decided the new plan must be placed before the whole commission for approval.

The original plan, which called for about 925 housing units on 232 acres of land, was approved by the district planning commission last fall and subsequent attempts to have the commission reconsider the proposal failed.

The new plan, it was learned, calls for the use of 220 acres, on which will be located about 1,000 units.
